Annual Management Report of Fund Performance as at December 31, 2024

RGP Global Sector Fund

Management Discussion of Performance

Investment Objective and Strategies

- The Fund's objective is to provide long-term growth by investing mostly in global equity securities, either directly or through investments in securities of exchange-traded funds or mutual funds. The Fund uses strategic asset allocation to invest most of its assets in global equities.
- Up to 100% of the Fund's assets may be invested in global equity securities, exchange-traded funds, or other mutual funds.
- The Funds identifies industries or sectors with favourable long-term trends, high growth potential, near term market opportunities, or attractive valuations. The manager invests, either directly or indirectly, in companies he considers best exposed to these factors.
- The Funds manages the overall portfolio diversification and risk exposures by controlling its geographical and sector allocation, financial ratios and sensitivity to market volatility.
- The Fund intends to hold less than 10% of its assets into fixed income, cash and cash equivalent, either directly or indirectly through exchange-traded funds, money market mutual funds or cash instruments for operational purposes.

Risk

The Fund's risk level is medium. The overall level of risk of investing in the Fund remains as discussed in the Simplified Prospectus and has not significantly increased or decreased as a result of operations during the period. Accordingly, the Fund also remains suitable for the investors described in the Simplified Prospectus.

Results

The Fund's A class returned 14.5% after fees and expenses, for the period from January 1st, 2024, to December 31, 2024. The net returns of the other classes of this Fund are similar to those of Class A, with the exception of differences attributable to fee structures. For class performance and long-term Fund performance, please refer to the "Past Performance" section of this report. The portfolio's benchmark returned 29.4% for the reporting period. The index is composed of 100% of the MSCI World Index, (CAD).

Market Overview

Stock markets mostly delivered positive returns during financial year ended December 31, 2024. The MSCI World Index returned 29.4% in Canadian dollars over this period. Political uncertainties and armed conflicts abroad did not overly perturb investors, but they did contribute to the remarkable rise in the price of gold. The S&P 500 index, which groups the largest US companies, reached new highs again in December, demonstrating to the resilience of stock markets despite a complex economic environment. The technology sector particularly stood out in the wake of the artificial intelligence craze. Paradoxically, the strength of US economic growth did not allow cyclical sectors such as materials and energy to stand out. Their returns lagged far behind those of the communications, technology, and consumer discretionary sectors.

The performance of bond investments was more mixed, following divergent movements in the forward yield curves. Shorter maturities fared better than longer ones. Credit spreads separating riskier corporate bonds from those issued by governments remained at very low levels, a sign that investors had little fear of future defaults by corporate issuers.

The Canadian economy proved less vigorous than that of the United States. The Bank of Canada cut its key rate before June 5th, 2024, in response to signals of economic slowdown and progress in its fight against inflation. The yield to maturity on 10-year US Treasury bonds exceeded 4.5% at year-end, 1.3% higher than the Canadian equivalent. The Canadian dollar also depreciated, especially in Q4, when it lost 6% of its value against the US dollar.

On the global scene, China and the major developed countries, openly engaged in a race to build and secure their microprocessor supply chains, continued their efforts in this direction. Chip manufacturers and their equipment suppliers benefited from the situation.

In the second half of the year, the results of the US presidential elections and expectations of protectionist trade policies and corporate tax cuts influenced the financial markets. In parallel with the activity on the political scene, major companies, particularly in the financial and technology sectors, reported good quarterly results. The tech giants continued to dominate the indices, such that a third of the US stock market now rests on seven companies. This increased concentration makes the US stock market more vulnerable to fluctuations in the performance of these few companies.

At the end of this period, the U.S., Canadian, and developed European and Asian stock market indices were up 35.8%, 21.7%, and 13.2%, respectively over 12 months, when reported in Canadian dollars. The Canadian bond composite returned 4.2%, compared with 1.5% for the global bond composite, hedged in Canadian dollars.

Factors impacting performance:

The Fund underperformed its benchmark. In addition to expenses, the manager believes that several factors had a positive or negative effect on the Fund's performance. It is appropriate to assess the various factors by considering both the impact on the Fund's absolute returns and the impact on relative returns, i.e. in comparison with the benchmark.

Over the past 12 months, all 11 sectors have posted positive absolute returns in Canadian dollars, making a significant contribution to the fund's performance. The technology, financial services and communications sectors performed particularly well, each recording gains in excess of 35%. Their significant weighting in the world index, combined with their excellent performance, with an average return of approximately 39%, contributed to the rise in the world index over the year. The stock markets of developed Europe, Asia and Canada also delivered positive returns for the Fund and investors in general, albeit below those of the U.S. stock markets. This outperformance was due to several factors reminiscent of the previous year, notably the resilience of the US economy and the market's enthusiasm for semiconductors and artificial intelligence, which particularly benefited the technology and communications sectors.

Conversely, resource-related sectors such as energy and materials performed more modestly, with returns of 11.3% and 0.1% respectively in Canadian dollars. The slight drop in the price of a barrel of oil slowed the progress of the energy sector. The materials sector, meanwhile, came under pressure from weaker global economic growth outside the United States. Finally, the -3.8% drop in the Canadian dollar's effective exchange rate index, and the -7.6% drop against the U.S. dollar alone, had a positive impact on the performance of both foreign investments and the Fund.

The factors affecting the Fund's returns differ when analyzed in comparison with the benchmark index. The rise of the stock market indices was characterized by uneven participation by the various sectors. Only three sectors outperformed the global index: technology, communications and financials.

The Fund's over- or under-exposure to the various sectors is a potential source of added or subtracted value. Over the period, our slight overexposure to the communications sector had a positive effect on the Fund's relative performance, as did our underexposure to the healthcare sector. Conversely, our underweight in technology proved unfavorable, as did our overexposure to the materials and real estate sectors.

Still in comparison with the index, our lower allocations to very large technology companies and US markets detracted from the Fund's relative returns. By the same token, the Fund's increased allocations to large- and mid-cap stocks, as well as Canadian and EAFE stocks, had the same negative effect on relative performance.

Changes to the portfolio:

The manager carries out transactions to take advantage of market movements and adjust allocations between geographic regions, economic sectors, industries, companies and target themes. For the period under review, the manager did not make any significant changes to the portfolio, or any changes that would not fall within the normal scope of the Fund's strategies.

Recent Developments

The portfolio manager believes there is a high level of uncertainty in the market. He also considers that unprecedented shocks in the market have posed challenges for many companies. In his opinion, geopolitical and economic risks have a greater impact on the markets.

Firstly, the intentions of the American government regarding the increase in trade tariffs are likely to create uncertainty, at least in the short term, to international trade. Among other things, this could result in higher input costs for American companies, reduced sales for international companies, and higher prices for consumers. It could also hinder the deployment of capital and investment projects. Application of trade tariffs by the American government remains uncertain. However, the application of tariffs remains uncertain.

Still with regards to the political situation in the United States, the reassessment of government institutions and the desire to cut budgetary spending are destabilizing measures, although they also represent a potential for favorable returns. The reaction of the markets to the effects of these measures will only become apparent over time. Currency prices and risk premiums on long-term bonds could nevertheless experience more volatility than usual in the coming months. Future events and their influence on the markets remain uncertain at all times.

On March 30, 2025, Mr. Gilles Lemieux and Mr. Pierre Rousseau were appointed Chairman and member of the independent review committee, respectively, following the termination of Mr. Michel Desjardins' mandate.

² Net assets and distributions are based on the actual number of units outstanding at the relevant time. The increase/decrease from operations is based on the weighted average number of units outstanding over the accounting period.

³ Distributions were paid in cash, reinvested in additional units of the Fund, or both.

⁴ This information is provided as at the end of each year or period shown.
